[1] This film is a remake of Telugu's film Nuvvostanante Nenoddantana. It was a production of Shree Venkatesh Films. The rural scenes shown in this film were shot at the original location and set where Telugu's film was shot in a village near Araku in Andhra Pradesh. Plot Rahul (Dev) is a wealthy city boy, born to billionaire parents and raised in Kolkata. On the other hand, Puja (Payel Sarkar) is a traditional and simple desi girl, from a village in West Bengal that is raised by her only brother, Indra (Tapas Paul). He is heartbroken when his father marries another woman and throws them out of the house, humiliating them on the way. Their mother dies and their tomb is built on the small land they possess until the zamindar tells them it is their land, since their mother had taken a loan from the man. Indra volunteers to day and night, to pay the loan as long as they don't tear down your mother's grave. Zamindar agrees and the head of the local station helps them. Slowly Indra and and Grow. One day, Barsha, Puja's best friend, comes to their house to invite Puja to her house while she marres. Barsha's older brother, Rahul, also arrives on the same day as the United Kingdom, finishing his studies. Slowly Rahul and Puja fall in love, but Rahul's father can't stand it, for Puja is not as rich as them, and therefore is not in his standards; Rahul will also be married to the daughter of Rahul's business partner, Shantonu Chowdhury, Mona. Shantonu Chowdhury humiliates Puja, as well as Indra, who arrives a minute early, and both are thrown from the house after Shantonu Chowdhury accuses them of trying to seduce and arrest Rahul. When Rahul learns of this, he goes to Puja's house and begs his brother to accept him. Indra gives him a chance, just as he had a chance for Zamindar when he was little. Rahul is tasked with taking care of cows, cleaning after them and growing more crops than Indra until the end of the season; If he does not, Rahul will be expelled from the village and will never be able to see Puja again. A village boy who was beaten by Indra earlier, he can't stand it. With his henchmen, Mona's father trying to make Rahul lose the competition, Rahul has to work hard for his love, eating red peppers and rice every day, even if he can't stand it. Through many shenanigans on the side of the villagegoers and Mona's side, Rahul eventually proves his love for Puja for Indra, and manages to grow more grain. However, the village henchman kidnaps Puja and then tries to rape her. A fight takes place in which Rahul kills the henchman, Indra, after realizing that Rahul and Puja should be together, takes the blame for it and spends 5 years in prison. The film ends with Indra's release from prison, which is also when Puja and Rahul marry, in the presence of all. Shantonu Chowdhury is also happy to have Puja as daughter-in-law.
